

Jason Warner is a spiritual teacher, musician, and ceremonial facilitator committed to equipping faith leaders with tools to create more embodied, participatory spiritual experiences. With deep roots in the New Thought movement, Jason has served Unity congregations nationwide and collaborated with respected spiritual leaders including Marianne Williamson.

His personal journey—from homelessness at 23 to becoming a spiritual entrepreneur, author, and real estate broker—reflects the transformative power of spiritual principle in action.

Influenced by indigenous ceremonial traditions and his work with the Kuntanawa Tribe of Brazil, Jason integrates sacred sound, mantra, and simple ritual frameworks that ministers can immediately apply within their own communities. His approach helps shift services from performance-centered gatherings to shared sacred experiences, fostering connection, presence, and collective spiritual activation.

Jason empowers leaders to remember that ceremony is not an addition to ministry—it is the heart of it. Find out more at <https://thenewearthshaman.com/>
